HIS FORTY-ONE YEARS
GIVING THE WAY TO MY
Grandsons and Granddaughters
IN THE HOPE THAT THE
BEST OF FATES OF THE FAMILY
MAY BE THEIR HERITAGE

PREFACE.

THE pride of ancestry — of those who went before us, who have through generations built up the character, the peculiarities, and the distinguishing marks of the present generation, has a home in the hearts of nearly all men. To be a member of a family that have been leaders in the beginning of great movements — the forming of great religious denominations, is indeed cause for congratulation, and looking back over the history of the family of Haggards, from the time when Sir Andrew Ogard came from Denmark and settled in Bradenham, County of Norfolk, England, down to the present day, in the family there have been a succession of leaders in thought, leaders in action, that has moved the world's progress, and the world is better for their having lived.

The compiling of the genealogy and history of the Haggard family has taken a vast amount of time and labor — a labor of love, however, but appreciation of the result will recompense for it all. Not only that, but the stirring up of the musty records of the past, the reviewing of the pleasant comings and goings of our fathers, has carried with it its own pleasures, and these I have tried to set down in as short, concise, and interesting a way as possible.

Among the family of Haggards we find the hardy pioneer, who hewed from the forests of the pathless west a part of the civilization we now enjoy, who have converted the prairies into a land of plenty.

The most noteworthy fact, perhaps, is that two of the foremost religious denominations in this country were fathered by Haggards—the Baptists and Christian—or Campbellites—which, as the record will show, had as great a part in their development and growth as any family in this country. Temperance and morality have always been characteristics.

This work, however, will speak for itself. It is the record of a family—necessarily incomplete in some things, yet, I believe, embracing all the main points, many noble deeds and facts of interest concerning the different branches of the Haggard family.

Hoping it will be accepted as a tribute to those who have gone before and that all those who may read this book may appreciate the value of having it for ready reference, and that they will each take pride in adding to it or perpetuating the work of keeping in good form the genealogy, record, etc., of present or future generations, I am,

Very Respectfully,

DAVID D. HAGGARD.

The Haggards in England.

CHAPTER I.

THE Haggards of Bradenham claim descent from Sir Andrew Ogard (Haggard), Knight, of Bradenham Castle, County Norfolk, who settled in England and was naturalized, Henry VI. (1433). He was a scion of a most distinguished family in Denmark, where the name is still to be found. However this may be, the pedigree of the Haggards can be traced back to the Fifteenth century, about which time we find:

I. David Haggard of Ware (Herts), who was assessed at £10 for lands there (Subsidy Rolls, 14 and 15,) Henry VIII. (1522-23). His will was proved in 1534 (Comm. Essex and Herts), and left a son:

The Haggards of America.

CHAPTER II.

WE learn from the foregoing chapter that the Haggards of England all descended from the one head, to-wit: Sir Andrew Ogard (Haggard), who came to England from Denmark, and was naturalized (Henry VI., 1433), the records showing that to be true. Then we are without doubt of the same stock, for we are known to be of English origin.

The traditions of our fathers are that one James Haggard (the son of a wealthy aristocratic Lord of England), who had been educated for the ministry, left England about 1698 and came to America as a passenger on a merchant ship bound for Norfolk, Va.

When he landed he was yet under 21 years of age, but having a fine education, his first employment was teaching school. There was connected with this school a young woman whose charms so impressed him that they were afterwards married. As the result of this union several sons were born to them.

The above we give as it has been handed down to us, but, be that as it may, we find that in the early part of the 18th century there were four or more families of Haggards in the eastern part of Virginia, and they claim, and are generally understood, to have been sons of the school teacher above mentioned. Their names were:

Nathaniel, Edmund, Zachariah, and Gray (or Granville).

DESCENDANTS OF NATHANIEL HAGGARD.

The records show that Nathaniel Haggard was born November 21, 1722, and that he married Elizabeth Gentry, a lady of English descent, and that they settled in Albemarle county, Virginia, near Charlottesville. They were members of the Baptist church. They raised a family of seven sons and three daughters, as follows:

Henry, born 1745; Baptist preacher.

Martin, born 1748; Baptist preacher.

Elizabeth, born 1752; married Ned Kindred, a Baptist preacher.

John, born 1754; farmer.

Mary, born 1757; married a Baptist preacher.

James, born 1759; Baptist preacher.

Jane, born 1761; married a Mr. Gentry.

Bartlett, born 1763; carpenter and farmer.

David, born 1763, carpenter and farmer.

Nathaniel, born 1765; farmer.

Bartlett and David were twins and so resembled each other that but few of the neighbors could distinguish one from the other. David was a private soldier in the Revolutionary War, and it is related of them that very often Bartlett would come to visit him in camp and they would quietly exchange clothing and David would go back home to make a visit, Bartlett taking his place, and no one in his company or mess being the wiser. Later they married sisters.

In the year 1788 Nathaniel Haggard, with his family, removed to Clark county, Kentucky, and settled between Winchester and Boonsborough, then a wilderness.

He bought a fine tract of land two miles south of Winchester, which he improved and on which he and his wife, Elizabeth, lived the remainder of their days in the enjoyment of the society of their children who had settled near them.

He died August 21, 1820, at the ripe age of 82 years. His wife lived to the extreme age of 88 years and 11 months. They are buried in a lot on the Boonsborough pike, two miles from Winchester and seven miles from Boonsborough.

On this tract of land he built a house of hewn cherry logs with port-holes for defense in case of an attack from the Indians. They were numerous and troublesome at that time. This house is still standing on the land, which has been in possession of the male members of the family from pioneer days to the present time.

This part of Clark county had been settled only a few years before by a colony of Baptists from Culpeper and Orange counties of Virginia, so that when Mr. and Mrs. Haggard arrived at their destination they found already a Baptist church organization; and on the 14th day of June, 1788, Nathaniel and Elizabeth Haggard united with the Providence Baptist church, as shown by the church records, and today the oldest and most famous church south of Mason and Dixon's line is the Providence Baptist in Clark county, Kentucky, seven miles southwest of Winchester. It was organized at a different place from where the congregation now meets, and in those days a great distance away. Virginia was the church's birthplace.

The record commenced December 1, 1780, on Holston river in Virginia. This church started as an organized body from the counties of Orange and Culpeper, Virginia, their destination Boonsborough, Ky., with a membership on first calling of the roll at Holston of forty-five members, but in 1781, it, with the colony, moved to Kentucky, Daniel Boone being included among the congregation. It has in its history occupied three buildings—one of log, one of stone, and the present one, a modern frame.

This is the pioneer church organization in the state, and is a part of the very interesting unpublished history of Kentucky. The pastor of the church, Robert Elkins, held his position for forty years. The present clerk has filled his own place for forty-eight years.

As stated a log house was first built, but a few years later a solid stone structure was erected by the pioneer Baptists. This early day sanctuary has stood the test of time, the masonry showing not a crack today, having stood as firm as the church organization itself. The building is over 100 years old.

Near by this old church is the more modern and commodious house of worship built by the present congregation. No services are held in the old stone structure, but it stands a monument to the thoroughness and careful work of Kentucky's early Baptists.

Henry Haggard, the oldest son of Nathaniel Haggard, was born in Albemarle county, Virginia, about 1744. At an early age he became a Baptist preacher and continued to preach until his death, at 90 years of age. Soon after the close of the Revolution he moved to East Tennessee with his family, and after a period of years emigrated to Alabama. To him was born five sons and one daughter: James, David, Henry, Joel and Noah.

The daughter, Nancy, married a Thacher, and with the father and two of the brothers, Joel and Noah, removed to Alabama. One son, Rev. James Haggard, came to Kentucky in 1790 and settled in Fayette county, near Lexington.

In 1821 he moved back to Sevier county, Tennessee, where he died in 1851. He raised six sons and several daughters, as follows: Martin, born 1785; Atchley, Jackson, James, Noah H., and Porter.

The daughters, so far as can be learned, are Lydia, Polyne, and Mary.

Martin, oldest son of Rev. James Haggard, raised five sons and five daughters, as follows: Rev. James P., Zachariah, Clayburn, Pleas, and Martin. The daughters were Fannie, Mary, Elizabeth, Minerva, and Mariah. The sons of James P. Haggard are William, George, Elijah, Murphy, and Alexander. The daughters are Minerva, Elizabeth, and Millie.

Atchley Haggard, son of Rev. James Haggard, and grandson of Henry Haggard, raised four sons, William M., James, Randall, and Jasper.

William M. resides at Marysville, Blount county, Tenn.

James, son of Atchley Haggard, died in 1878 and left one son, Noah, born 1862. P. O. address, Milcan, Tenn.

James, fourth son of Rev. James Haggard, and grandson of Rev. Henry Haggard, moved to Jasper county, Missouri, about 1869 and died in 1890. At one time he was county judge. He leaves one son, James, P. O. address, Sarcoxie, Mo.

Rev. Noah H. Haggard, fifth son of Rev. James Haggard, is now living. His P. O. address is Blackoak, Sevier county, Tenn.

David Haggard, the second son of Rev. Henry Haggard, was born in Albemarle county, Virginia, about the year 1767. He married Milhe Elkins. He came to Clark county, Kentucky, about 1790 and settled twelve miles south of Winchester. He was a man of energy, thrift, and influence; reared a family of ten children: Polly, Lucy, Sally, Ezekiel E., Zechariah E., John E., Robert E., Nancy, Julia, Noah G., David J., Melissa M., Elizabeth D.

Ezekiel E., oldest son of David Haggard, known as "Bald Davy," and grandson of Rev. Henry Haggard, was born in Clark county, Kentucky, 1798. When a young man he went to Bowling Green and was married to Malinda McAfee. They had one son and five daughters:

1. Lucy J. Haggard was married to Mr. Carter. They reside at New Market, Marion county, Ky.

2. Harriet Haggard was married to Mr. Haydon. They reside near Lebanon, Ky.

3. Booker Haggard was married to Rev. W. G. Inman, an eminent Baptist divine.

4. Julia Haggard was married to Mr. S. Wright. They reside in Kansas City, Mo.

5. Melissa Haggard was married to Mr. Richardson. She is a widow and lives in Kansas City, Mo.

emy at Lebanon, Ky. Early in life he evinced the rare energy and ambition of his parents, and cherished as his chief ambition that he should become a doctor. He was only 11 years of age when his father died, and devoted himself to the affairs of the farm until he had assisted his mother in freeing their property from encumbrance. He then taught school and afterwards became tax assessor of Marion county at the early age of 19. He continued these occupations until he had earned enough money to give him a medical education. He entered the office of Dr. Shuck at Lebanon to study medicine in 1847. After the usual office reading for one year, he attended a course of lectures at the University of Louisville. He rode horseback to Philadelphia the year following to attend another session at the Jefferson Medical College, where he graduated with distinction in medicine in March, 1851. He located in Gallatin, Tenn., in May, 1851. He soon established a large practice. In 1859 he married Martha, the oldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Elmore Douglass, who died in 1866. To them were born two daughters, the eldest dying in infancy.

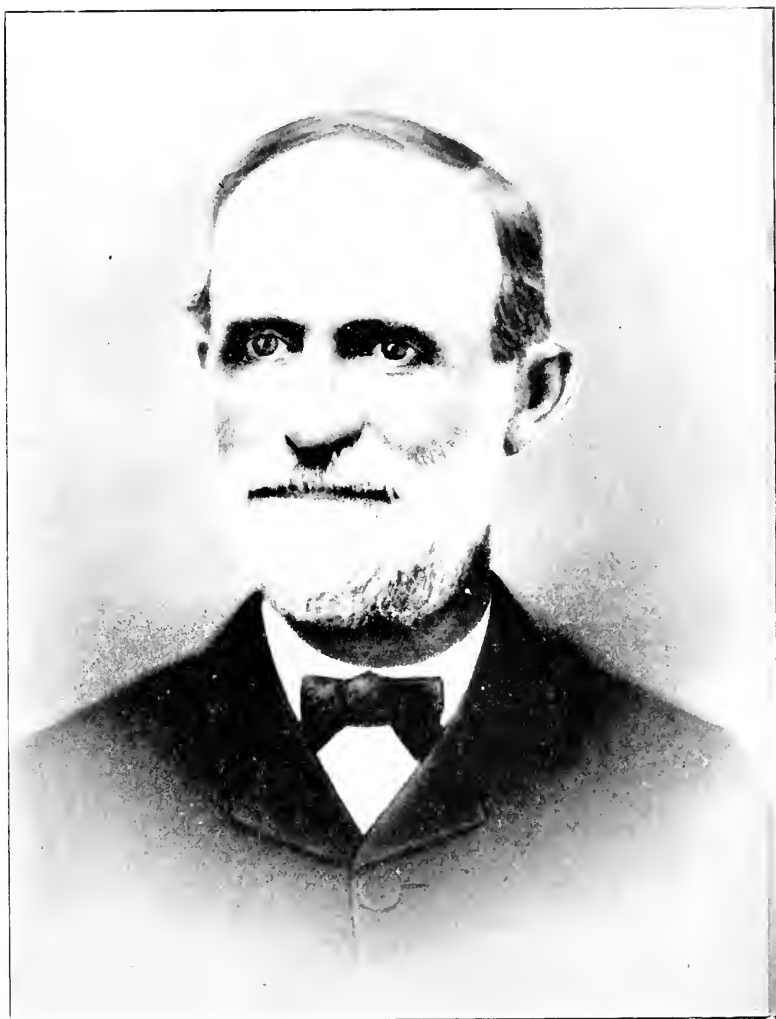

Louise Douglass Haggard was born in Gallatin, May 4, 1860. She was very proficient in literature and quite gifted in elocution. She graduated from the Peabody Normal College in 1880. She married J. Y. Crawford, M. D., D. D. S., in 1885. Four children were born to them. The first, George, died in 1896 at the age of 9. The next was named for his father and was born in 1892. Two girls, twins, named respectively Jane Douglass and Mary Louise, are now 2 years of age. Mrs. Crawford enjoys the distinction of being one of the most accomplished and lovely women of Nashville.

Dr. Haggard moved to Davidson county, Tennessee, in 1861, and from there he moved to Nashville in 1875. In the first year of his residence in that city he became connected as an instructor with the medical department of the University of Nashville and Vanderbilt University. In 1884 he was chosen to fill the chair of diseases of women and children in the medical department of the University of Tennessee. At the meeting of the American Medical Association at New Orleans in 1887 he was elected chairman of the section on diseases of children. At that time he was one of the attending surgeons at the city hospital, and later also became gynecologist to St. Margaret's Hospital. In 1889 he organized the Southern Surgical and Gynecological Association and was honored with its first presidency. In 1892 he was elected as president of the Nashville Academy of Medicine and in 1893 he was one of the honorary presidents of the Pan-American Medical Congress. He has been a teacher of surgery for nearly a quarter of a century and has thousands of students throughout the south and west. In 1870 he married Jane Douglass, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. B. Douglass. They had two children, William David, Jr., born in 1872, and Douglass, born in 1876.

William David Haggard, Jr., was educated in the city schools of Nashville, completing his education at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, where he won distinction in literature and oratory. He took up the study of medicine in the medical department of the University of Nashville, taking an intermediate course in the Kentucky School of Medicine at Louisville. He graduated in the former institution in 1893.

receiving the first honor in a class of 113 men. He served as interne in the Nashville City Hospital for one year, then going to New York where he received the appointment by competitive examination to the Womans' Hospital. He was house surgeon at that hospital for two years under the most distinguished surgeons of the day. Upon his return to Nashville he was offered an associate professorship in gynecology in the University of Tennessee, thus becoming the youngest professor of surgery in this country. He was made secretary of the Medical Society of the State of Tennessee, and there given a professorship in abdominal surgery at the University of the South at Sewanee. At the Denver meeting of the American Medical Association in 1897, he was elected secretary of the section on obstetrics and diseases of women of the American Medical Association. He has been offered the authorship of a work on Surgical Gynecology by one of the largest publishing firms, an honor only rarely bestowed after years of labor. He is now associated with his father in the conduct of a private surgical hospital. On January 18, 1899, he was married to Miss Mary Laura Champe, one of the most gifted and brilliant young women of the South.

Douglass Haggard was born in Nashville March 3, 1876. He received a high school education and also studied at the University of Nashville. His medical course was taken in the college in which his father was a professor. He received one of the honors of the class of 1898, having studied also at the University of the South the year preceding. Dr. Haggard is now finishing his course of study in the Presbyterian Hospital in New York City, being on the staff of the pathological laboratory.

Rodney Haggard, Judge of the Clark County Court, son of Augustine L. and Lou Ann Mullins Haggard, was born in Clark county, Kentucky, October 3, 1844, and educated in the common schools of the county and in the high school at Winchester.

At the age of 17 he began teaching. When the war between the states broke out he dismissed his school and joined the Buckner Guards, in Kirby Smith's command. He was a recruiting officer and raised a company, of which his uncle, Gordon C. Mullins, was elected captain, and himself lieutenant. This was the first company raised for Chenault's regiment of John H. Morgan's command, and Judge Haggard was with this command until Gen. Morgan was captured in the Ohio raid, at which time he was in command of the remnant of the regiment, all his superior regimental officers having been killed, wounded or captured. He was then a prisoner on Johnson's Island until the close of the war. During his active service in the army he took part in a number of engagements, among which were the battles of Richmond, Ky.; Hartsville, Tenn.; Green River Bridge, Mills' Spring, West Liberty, Lebanon, and a number of fights in Indiana and Ohio, and in fact was in all of the battles in which Morgan's command was engaged during his service with it, and was a gallant soldier.

After the war, not being 21 years of age, he resumed his work, studying and teaching school alternately until August, 1861, when he was elected sheriff of Clark county. This was the first regular election after the war, and the first at which he had ever voted. He was the youngest man who ever held that office in the state of Kentucky, and the first to settle his accounts with the auditor each year. In 1870 he was re-elected, and began the study of law under Chief Justice James Symson, of Winchester, and obtained license to practice his profession from the judge of the court of appeals; subsequently graduated from the Louisville law school, was admitted to the bar in March, 1873, and has ever since his admission to the bar enjoyed a lucrative practice, being engaged upon one side or the other of all important cases in the county. In 1880 he was elected without opposition to the state senate from a district composed of Clark, Bourbon, and Montgomery counties, and served as senator for four years; made a splendid record as legislator, having introduced the act creating the state board of equalization, the act equalizing and extending exemptions, to require county attorneys to assist commonwealth attorneys in prosecutions in circuit courts, and many other important measures, all of which still remain upon the statutes. He was elected county judge of the Clark County Court in 1893 to fill an unexpired term, and in 1897 was re-elected for the full term, and is now serving in that capacity. He has been the attorney for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company for fifteen years.

and attorney for the Kentucky Central Division of the Louisville & Nashville railroad for twelve years. He is an able judge and an upright, trustworthy citizen, and in whom the community places unbounded confidence. His natural qualities of sturdy, reliable manhood are enforced by the strong prestige of an honorable and honored ancestry. He has always been an active, unflinching Democrat, and his election has always been as the nominee of that party. He is a public speaker of much ability and his time and means have been freely given in the interest of his party.

He was married in February, 1868, to Mary E. Baldwin, of Clark county, daughter of Lient. W. W. Baldwin, who was killed on the Confederate side in the disastrous fight at Green River Bridge, July 4, 1863. Her mother was Mary A. Eades Baldwin. They have seven living children: Leland, Frank Hunt, Annie Mildred, wife of J. W. McFarlin; Mary Rodney, John Henry, Rodney, and Benjamin Wheeler.

His father, Augustine Lewis Haggard, son of David T. Haggard, of Albemarle county, Virginia, and Patsy Adams Haggard, of Clark county, Kentucky, but originally from Virginia, was born in Clark county, June 3, 1820, and was educated in the common schools of that county.

He held successively the offices of justice of the peace, Judge of the County Court, clerk of the Clark Circuit Court, and master commissioner of the Clark Court of Common Pleas. He took a great interest in public affairs and was an active Whig until that party was merged into the Republican party, when he became a Democrat. He was a man of strong native ability and a philanthropist whose active benevolence was the outcome of religious principle, consequently he was very prominent in church work and his judgment much depended upon in church affairs, as well as in political circles. He divided his time between Winchester and his country home until he died, December 19, 1895, at his home six miles from Winchester. He is buried at Mt. Olive Cemetery, on the Muddy Creek Turnpike Road, where three generations of the family are resting: himself and wife, his father and mother, grandfather and grandmother lie buried side by side.

All of his ancestors have been christian people, and, like him etc, members of the Baptist church, and are of English and Scotch blood. Judge Haggard is now in the prime of life, full of mental and physical vigor, and has the promise of a bright future before him.

Rev. James Haggard, fourth son of Nathaniel, was born in Allemar's county, Virginia, in 1759. He also united with the Baptist church when quite young and was licensed to preach. He was a man of splendid physique, being full six feet high and commanding appearance. He married Betsy Gentry and moved to Clark county, Kentucky, in 1790. Was received into the Providence Baptist church January 5, 1791, and was ordained preacher and elder.

He resided not far from Winchester on a farm and gave part of his time, preaching in the new settlements then being made by immigration. He raised a family of three sons, Nathaniel, Dabney, Harmon, and one daughter, Polly, who became the second wife of Archibald Steel.

About the year 1816, Rev. James Haggard, with his family, removed to Christian county, Kentucky, and settled five

During the year 1828, Rev. James Haggard, with his son, Harmon Haggard, and family removed to Sangamon county, Illinois, and settled on a farm three miles west of Springfield, where he spent the remaining years of his life, a man greatly beloved by all who knew him, after preaching for sixty years, having labored for the good of others, died at the age of 80 years.

Harmon Haggard, third son of Rev. James Haggard, was born in Clark county, Kentucky, July 13, 1790. He came to Christian county, Kentucky, with his father, and on November 5, 1822, he married Sally Bartlet Steel, daughter of Archy and Betsy Steel.

David Haggard, fifth son of Nathaniel and Elizabeth Haggard, was born in Albemarle county, Virginia, in 1763. He enlisted at the age of 16 years in the Revolutionary army, and was in the service and on duty at Yorktown at the surrender of Lord Cornwallis to General Washington.

In his early life he followed the carpenter's trade, and as he lived near President Thomas Jefferson, he was often employed to make additions or changes in his mansion at Monticello. Mr. Jefferson having been sent on a mission to France by this government, he fell in with some of their styles of architecture. On his return home he determined to make some radical changes in his mansion to conform to the French styles. One of the changes consisted in putting in new front windows extending down to the door, which he filled with large panes of French plate glass that he brought from Paris. Mr. Jefferson was very fond of the chase, and for that purpose kept a fine pack of hounds. While Mr. Haggard was working upon the house, an incident occurred that calls to mind the fact that Mr. Jefferson had a brother living with him who was simple or weak minded, which fact I believe is not generally known nor is it anywhere recorded in history. This simple brother remonstrated against the long windows and finally said: "Why, Tom, the dogs will run right through them."

Not long afterwards Mr. Jefferson's overseer came in from another farm followed by his dog, who took up his position on the veranda while his master sat in the front room talking with Mr. Jefferson. Pretty soon the hounds got scent of the strange dog and gave chase. In order to keep out of their way he ran around the house with the whole pack after him, and when several circuits had been made he espied his master sitting in the room and made a lunge through the glass with the hounds following close at his heels.

In 1779 David Haggard married Miss Nancy Dawson, a daughter of Rev. Martin Dawson, a noted Baptist divine. In 1792 they removed to Clark county, Kentucky, where they raised a family of two sons and eight daughters.

In 1823 they removed to Trigg county, near the Cerulean Springs, and about twelve miles west of Hopkinsville, and in 1836 to Bloomington, Ill., where he died at the age of 80 years.

He was an unusually active and energetic man and of high moral standing. He was a constituent member and active agent in organizing the first Baptist church of Bloomington, Ill.

Although a soldier of the Revolution and entitled to a pension, he never applied for it. He is the only soldier of the American revolution buried in the Bloomington cemetery.

Mr. Lander was an energetic man and did an extensive farming and stock business. Mrs. Lander died in 1833.

His education was only such as could be obtained in the country school of that day. Since quitting the trade he has been engaged in various occupations. About twelve years he spent in the nursery business and about the same length of time was spent as a traveling salesman in different lines of business. Being an expert geographer he spent several years in map surveying in Illinois and Indiana. Edited and published the Bloomington Journal for six years, and is still a contributor to its columns.

In 1888 he wrote and published a history of the Prohibition party, a work recognized as standard authority throughout the country. He was one of the founders of the first nucleus of the Prohibition party in 1868, and has occupied important committee positions, including state chairman and member of the national committee. As state organizer he canvassed the state in 1883 and 1884 and did more or less public speaking in more than fifty counties. Missionary Union, and on the 19th of September of the same year he left with his family for Assam, India, where he has labored faithfully and successfully as a missionary ever since. to, or near, Exira, Ia., and from there to Minneapolis, Minn. He was a man of large means. He died a few years since leaving his widow only, as they had no children. She is now living in Minneapolis, Minn.

Martha Haggard, second daughter of David and Nancy Haggard, was born in Clark county, Kentucky, January 16, 1795. She married John Routt of the same county. Soon thereafter they removed to Christian county, and later to Eddyville. In 1829 Mr. Routt died, and his widow with her four children moved to Trigg county near her father, David Haggard. In 1834 she again married. This time to Henry Newton. In 1837 they removed to McDonough county, Illinois, and later to McLean county. To them were born Dawson, now of Boulder, Col.; Louesa a twin sister of Dawson, now Widow Wilson, of Normal, Ill., and Martin Haggard Newton, who served as County Recorder from 1887 to 1895, and for the past four years as County Clerk in Bloomington. Martha Routt Newton died in Covell, Ill., February 12, 1871. Her children by her first marriage were:

1. David, born 1815, and removed with the family to Illinois in 1837, and died soon after.

2. Sally, born in 1818, and came to Bloomington, Ill., in 1835, and in 1838 married James S. Bay and died a few years later leaving one child, a daughter, who married a Mr. James Walker, and is now a widow; resides in Normal.

3. Martha Elizabeth was born in Christian county, Kentucky, May 22, 1822; removed with the family to Illinois in 1837, and was there married to William Newton. They now reside in Cooksville, McLean county, Ill.

9. John L. Rountt, the youngest son of Martha Haggard and John Rountt, was born in Eddyville, Ky., April 21, 1826. He worked on the farm until about 15 years old, when he came to Bloomington and learned the carpenter's trade with Samuel B. Haggard. His education was only such as could be had in the country schools of that day. His career in public office began by his serving his ward in the town council of Bloomington during the years of 1851-55. In April, 1858, he was elected township collector, which office he held two terms. In 1860 he was elected sheriff of McLean county, which office he resigned in the summer of 1862 to enter the army. He was elected captain of Company E, 94th Illinois infantry. After serving as captain eight months he was detailed as quartermaster in General Herron's command, which at that time was the army of Missouri and Arkansas, with headquarters at Rolla, Mo. He at once began to get the supplies and stores ready to cross the country to Little Rock, Ark., and assist in the siege of Vicksburg.

His services were so appreciated that Judge David Davis and Hon. Isaac Funk and others urged President Lincoln to commission him regular quartermaster, which was done. He held this position until the close of the war in 1865. Soon after his return home he was elected treasurer of McLean county and held this position for two terms. Soon thereafter he was appointed chief clerk to Gen. Giles A. Smith, Second Assistant Postmaster General, but in a short time, without his knowledge, he was appointed United States Marshal for the southern district of Illinois, which position he held nearly two years, when he received a telegram informing him that he had been appointed Second Assistant Postmaster General to succeed General Smith, who had resigned on account of ill health. This office he held about three years when President Grant appointed him Governor of Colorado territory, where he remained until it was admitted as a state, when the people elected him governor. He was again elected Governor of the state in 1890 and at the close of the term was urged to accept the nomination for another term, but declined.

It is a noteworthy fact that all of the foregoing important positions held by him from 1854 to 1894 were filled with great ability and unchallenged integrity.

NATHANIEL HAGGARD.

Nathaniel Haggard, youngest son of Nathaniel and Elizabeth Haggard, was born in Albemarle county, Virginia, about 1765, and about 1788 came with his father's family to Clark county, Kentucky. He died on the 23d of July, 1852, aged 98 years, 11 months, and 16 days. He served three campaigns in the Revolutionary war. The last twenty years of his life he received a pension from the government. He was a preacher, a teacher of schools, and a miller, as well as a soldier. From there he moved in 1877 to Brown county, Minnesota. For twenty-five years or more he has been a pioneer preacher among the Disciples, or Christian church. In the beginning of his ministry, during a short res-

Of the sons of Edmund Haggard was James Haggard a farmer, and Nathan Haggard a lawyer, and a judge.

David Haggard and Rice Haggard were both able divines. Rice Haggard was born in 1769, in eastern Virginia. His mother was a Rice and of Welsh descent. He married a daughter of William Grimes, the first captain that entered the army under General Washington in 1776.

Rice Haggard was ordained as a Methodist minister in 1791, by Bishop Asbury, traveled with his brother David extensively as itinerant Methodist preachers through Virginia, North Carolina, central and southern Kentucky, mainly through Madison, Fayette, and adjoining counties. Below will be found his license, copied from the original document on parchment and in my possession.

David Haggard was appointed to the circuit that included Lexington, Ky., and vicinity and served that circuit during 1801 and 1802.

Rice Haggard filled an appointment in Madison and counties south of Fayette with great ability and acceptance, and continued to preach that doctrine until about the year 1803 or 1804, when he was convinced that the said doctrine was not in full accordance with the Bible teachings and then returned to Virginia and made application to conference or the Bishop, to be released from his relationship to the Methodist church, which was granted. See old book entitled "Early Methodism."

He then wrote a pamphlet called "Christian" and effected an organization under that name in 1805-6, and it was he who was the founder of the so called Campbellite church, instead of Alexander Campbell, as is commonly supposed. We are assured that authenticated proof justifies the foregoing assertion. He with his brother David, who had also severed his connection with the Methodist church, traveled extensively through portions of Virginia, central and southern Kentucky, preaching their new doctrine and organizing churches of their faith, having a large following and drawing largely from the Baptist churches. Rice Haggard had five children.

James Haggard was born in Norfolk, Virginia; in 1811 he moved to Rock Castle county, Kentucky. He was a lawyer and served several terms in the Legislature of Kentucky and was also judge in the Circuit Court of the sixth judicial district of Kentucky. Was a man of charity and benevolence, and lived to the age of 76 years.

Nancy Haggard was also born in Norfolk, Virginia, and moved to Kentucky with the family. She married a Mr. King. They had five children, John Q.A. King, Nancy King, Vic. King, Sallie King, Mariah King. The girls all married well and raised families that today ornament several towns in Kentucky, Texas, and Missouri.

All this occurred before Alexander Campbell came to America. He first landed in New York, September 29, 1809, and his first public utterance on the subject, as given in his biography by Robert Richards on P.P. 312-313, was July 15, 1810. This was at least five years after Rice Haggard's pamphlet was published.

Elizabeth Haggard married a Mr. King. They had two sons and one daughter.

H. C. King was an eminent lawyer and wrote the Tennessee code of laws, and also wrote the Arkansas code.

The other son, John E. King, was a wholesale cotton and tobacco merchant in New Orleans.

The daughter was named Ellen, and she married John Q. A. King, first cousin, who was Governor of Kentucky. He lived in Paducah, Ky. and died in Colorado some years since.

He was president of the Board of Internal Improvements of Kentucky for twelve years and was a member of the Legislature for three terms and of the Senate one term. Was colonel of the Fifth Kentucky cavalry during the civil war, and did valient service for the Union cause. Col. David R. Haggard married Miss Mary, daughter of B. F. Johnson, of Frankfort, Ky. Her mother was a Lee and the first cousin of Gen. Robert E. Lee. They had seven children, five sons and two daughters:

He was a fine writer and contributed to the Louisville Journal. He was a brilliant orator and one of the electors for Tilden and Hendricks. He was eminently popular; was a member of the Prentice Club. He died in 1883.

Tom Page Haggard, the second son, was a physician, graduate of Philadelphia College and the University of Louisville. Was a good physician; died in Arkansas.

Henry E. Haggard, the third son of Col. David R. Haggard, resides in Chicago and is now doing an extensive business as undertaker and embalmer at 153 South Western Avenue. He has traveled extensively in South Africa, Australia, and other points in the old world. He was for several years in the undertaking business in San Francisco. He married Miss Mary Killian, of Good Harbor, Mich., January 30, 1895. They have no children.

CHAPTER IV.

GRAY HAGGARD AND DESCENDANTS.

GRAY HAGGARD, one of the four original brothers in America, was born in Virginia about the year 1728.

From all we can gather he moved to North Carolina in an early day, and from there to a place called Powell's Valley, in Virginia. His numerous descendants have scattered so widely through Virginia, Georgia, Tennessee, and several other states that we find it difficult to obtain reliable information. For the above reason there may be found some discrepancies and omissions.

As in the case of other branches of the family, the earlier generations of this branch were generally Baptists, but later generations are quite largely connected with the Methodist Episcopal and Christian churches, not a few of them ministers of the gospel, some of them attaining to considerable eminence.

Tradition says that Gray Haggard had eight children. We have, however, found only four that we feel warranted in naming as sons of Gray Haggard, to-wit: Samuel, Henry, John, and William.

John Haggard, one of the sons of Gray Haggard, and brother of Henry, Samuel and Wm. Haggard, was born in Virginia about 1750. Married Jane Gibson in 1773. About 1787 John and William Haggard moved to Middle Tennessee.

The Indians had been very hostile and had murdered many families but at this time it was thought a permanent peace had been established. A fort called Brown's Station, not far from where Nashville now stands, however, had been built as a protection to families in case of a raid.

John Haggard and wife had four children, Edmund, Elizabeth, John and Samuel. The parents had sent Edmund, Elizabeth and Samuel to drive up the cows and while they were gone, the Indians suddenly came upon the parents and killed them, burning their house and all books and records. Some neighbors fleeing from the savages met the three children and conducted them to the fort in safety.

As we can find no record of John, it is supposed that he was also killed by the Indians. The three remaining children were taken by their uncle, William Haggard, afterwards of Montgomery county, with whom they lived until they were grown.

Elizabeth married a Mr. Jones, but we have no records of her further.

Edmund came to Illinois some time in the thirties and settled near Waverly, in Morgan county. He afterwards moved to Macoupin county and died at Virden, in 1865.

He married Elizabeth Andrews, and they had six boys and three girls, John D., Green B., William S., Jackson, Barton S., Mary Hanna, Zarelda, and Samuel.

John D., married Nancy Clack; no children.

Green B., married Eliza Smith, and they had five children.

Maranda married Joseph Ferguson, living at Virden.

Mahala married James Johnson, living in Winchester, Ill. James, Hattie and an infant are dead.

William Scott Haggard, third son of Edmund and Elizabeth Haggard, was born in Montgomery county, Tennessee, June 30, 1826; and died in Scottsville, Ill., February 14, 1883. He married Mary Elizabeth Short, March 25, 1855.

Mary Ellizabeth Short was born May 16, 1834. She is now a widow; postoffice address, Coffeerville, Kan. They had five children, two sons and three daughters.

1. Atlanta Eudocia Haggard, born March 2, 1856.

Samuel Haggard, sixth son of Edmond Haggard, married Maranda Grant. They had two sons and three daughters.

Eliza Ann and Mariah E., both died young.

William G. Haggard, son of Samuel, married Sarah Talkington. To them were born four boys and one girl, to-wit: Barton, Charles, William and Grover, all single; Emma married, name unknown.

Jennie married J. W. Lowder, and they had three boys and three girls, all single.

John Haggard, second son of Samuel, and grandson of Edmond Haggard, married Sarah Clack. They have one child dead and a son and daughter living. Postoffice, Virden, Ill.

Samuel, the son, married Ida Loving, and they have three children, Claude, Mable and Ola.

Mary married D. A. Richardson, and they have one daughter, Ethel M.

The children of Edmond Haggard are all dead except Zerelda Attebury, of Scottsville, Ill.

Samuel Haggard, the youngest son of John Haggard and grandson of Gray Haggard, was born December 15, 1784, and was but 5 years old at the time his parents were killed by the Indians. He married Elizabeth Peterson in Tennessee, and in 1832 they removed to Plymouth, Hancock county, Ill., where he died April 4, 1867, aged 83 years. They had eleven children:

MRS. MARTHA A. HAGGARD
WHITECLOUD, KAS.

Mrs. Martha A. Kington Haggard, wife of John P. Haggard, has been a woman of extraordinary energy, intelligence, and strength of character, as will be seen in a sketch that we feel justified in giving below. She was born in Henry county, Virginia, April 30, 1815, being now about 84 years old. She has always been very industrious, and has a great taste for needle work.

She says: "When I was 53 years old a neighbor made light of my undertaking a common log cabin quilt, and said I would never live to finish it. This was very amusing to me, so I resolved to keep a list of my unnecessary needle work from that date. Besides my common sewing and housework—and I am a great reader—this is a list of work done by me in the past 30 years.

"Scrap quilts, pieced, containing from 500 to almost 63,000 separate pieces, 112; quilted quilts, 39; embroidered bed spreads, 10; embroidered pillow shams, 5; embroidered head rests, 6; embroidered and tufted sofa cushions, 21; embroidered doilies, 67; embroidered splashers, 2; embroidered night gown sets, 6; knitted bed spread, 1; knitted doilies, 18; knitted toilet sets, 6; knitted lamp mats, 28; knitted hats, 2; knitted edging, yards, 59; knitted pulse warmers, pairs, 20; knitted chair scarfs, 6; knitted shoulder capes, 4; knitted shawl, 1; knitted stockings, pairs, 117; knitted mittens, pairs, 47; rag carpet, yards, 125; rag rugs, 27.

"I am not through with my work yet. Besides the above list I have a large box of embroidered things that I have done since my last birthday which was in April, and I expect to do a great deal more."

In relating reminiscences of her early days, she said: "We lived at Carthage, Mo., during the Mormon war, which was in 1844. The Mormons had killed the Governor of Missouri and were driven from that state, and settled near and in Nauvoo, where they had started a church. Their prophet, Joe Smith, and his brother, Hiram, had been arrested and confined in the Carthage jail, the old stone jail which is still standing, but is now used as a private residence. A mob of blacked men surrounded the jail on June 27, 1844, and when the Smith's saw them they thought it was their friends. The mob broke into the jail and their leader, who was the murdered governor's son, was not blacked. Joe recognized him and sprang back and cried, 'My God! It's the Missourian's!' The mob shot both the Smiths. I saw Joe as he leaped from the window. Seven bullets entered his body as he fell against the well curb. Had he fallen a foot farther over he would have gone into the well. The Mormons were afraid to come after the bodies so the citizens sent them to their friends. Some time after this word was received that the Mormons were coming and there was great excitement all through the county. The Mormons came trooping into town to try and find the man who killed their Prophet. They thought it was the "Carthage Grays" and surrounded the town, stationed armed men through the streets, and drove every man they saw to the court house. The people were frightened. Everyone who could leave went to the country. No one thought to take food or clothing with them. A Mrs. Smith, who was a cousin to the Mormon Smiths, lived just across the street from me. She was almost crazy with fright, so I went over and asked her to come to my house and stay until all was quiet. We started back and passed near one of the guards, who tried to run his horse over Mrs. S., and I took up a stick and struck at him. She said in a very weak and trembling voice, 'Oh, you won't kill me, will you?' I said, 'Mrs. S., I am ashamed of you, begging your life of a Mormon.' At this he put his hand on his sword, and with an oath, said, 'You go in the house and shut your mouth, or I'll cut your throat.' I walked right up to him and said, 'You cut my throat, you dirty Mormon you; I just dare you to touch me.' We left him swearing. Later in the day Mr. H. came home bringing several men with him and asked if I would get supper for them, as all the hotels were closed. Before I could reply, one of the men stepped up to me and attempted to lay his hand on my shoulder, and said, 'Why this is the little curly-headed Sis that I scared so this morning.' I sprang to my feet and raised my chair and said, 'Don't you touch me; no Mormon can lay a hand on me and live.' Mr. H. caught the chair and told him to go out, which he did. Mr. H. said that we had better go to the country, as everybody was leaving town, so I baked and packed food and clothing to take with us.

Mr. H. was county treasurer and had a large sum of the county's money in the house. We did not have safes then like we have now, so he put the money in a large box and threw a bed quilt over it and sent it by his brother and sister, who were quite young, to his father's house at Plymouth, 18 miles away, where it stayed for some weeks. He buried a box of money in the garden, we made garden over it, and in the fall, dug it up all right. A man and his wife went to get their horses to leave town, and while her husband was still in the barn she saw the Mormons coming down the street and jumped on her horse astride, she was a big fat woman, too, and started on a keen run, the Mormons after her. They ran her three miles before they got close enough to discover her sex. We went to the country to Mr. Hobert's. Dozens of town folks were there and had brought nothing to eat, so the men went back to town, leaving one man to protect us. At any little sound through the night he would jump up and yell, 'The Mormons are coming.' Once he jumped so high that he skipped his head on the low rafters. I said 'Now Mr. A., if you are so afraid of the Mormons just crawl under my bed and I'll protect you,' so he laid down then and was quiet until morning. One man lay in the wheat field all night and saw Mormons all around him with their guns. They would raise up and look about, then drop out of sight. When morning came these Mormons proved to be his neighbors. When Mr. H. went back to town he passed a store, Benny Clark's, and found the key in the lock. He looked in and saw the goods were all packed ready for shipment, so he locked the door and put the key in his pocket. Three days latter when the merchant came home he gave him the key which he had forgotten and left in the door."

The Haggards are noted for their correct habits and moral standing in the community, and are largely members of the Baptist, Methodist, and Christian churches.

Samuel Haggard, son of Gray Haggard, was born in Virginia, but went to Jackson county, Georgia, when a young man, where he married Nancy Hix, and raised sons as follows: James, Gray, Alfred, John, Samuel, and French. The daughters were Betsy, Patsy, Hannah, Polly, and Sally.

William H. C. Haggard, another son of Rev. Gray Haggard, was also born in Roane county, Tennessee. He moved to Fannin county, Texas, in 1868, where he died a few years since.

In 1885 he was pastor of the church at Hemstead, Tex., and also senior editor of a prohibition paper at the same time. His present residence is Atlanta, Ga. He has a younger brother, R. A. Haggard, residing with his widowed mother at Dublin, Tex.

French Haggard, a brother of William H. C. Haggard, was born in Roane county, Tennessee, in 1828, but has lived near Ferris, Hancock county, Illinois since some time in the early forties. We have no history of his descendents, if any.

James Haggard, son of Samuel, and grandson of Gray Haggard, was born in Jackson county, Georgia, and moved to Bedford county, Tennessee, near three forks of Duck river, about 1802, where he afterwards died. He was married three times and was the father of seventeen children. We have the names of only seven sons, as follows: John, Alfred, James, Washington, Wilson, Johnathan and Robert Martin, and two daughters, Mattie and Frances.

Rev. Robert Martin Haggard, one of the sons above mentioned was born in Bedford county, Tennessee, October 15, 1819. He has been a minister in the M. E. church south, forty-six years. When a young man he went to Tennessee where he married Elizabeth Rogers in 1818, and moved back to Georgia, where he lived and died. He was the father of three sons, James E., William R., and John.

William R. Haggard, died February 7, 1899, near Harmony Grove, Ga.
